

Dear friends,

I often find myself speechless when I encounter racism. Words fail me when the pain is so deep. But today, surrounded by so many people standing up for justice, I feel an overwhelming strength. Your presence gives me a voice and shows me that I am not alone. Thank you for having an open ear and an open heart for me today.

We have come together here today because we're deeply affected by something: the danger posed by right-wing extremism. Their hate speech seeks to divide our society and turn us against each other. But we will not be intimidated!

With every step we take together today, we send a clear signal: we stand for diversity, tolerance, and peaceful coexistence. Our hearts are filled with hope for a better future in which people of different origins and faiths walk hand in hand. We must not remain silent! We must say loudly and clearly: hate stops here!

Together let's light a beacon and set an example for a society in which everyone is respected, regardless of their origin or faith.

Let's raise our voices and sing together! Every note will ring with our determination to defeat the dark forces of hatred.
